BRITISH CRUISER SEIZE FORMER BOSTON SHIP

HUNDREDS IN DANGER IN MEXICO

WASHINGTON, March 10.—With several big warships speeding to Vera Cruz to exercise "moral coercion" on General Carranza, the Washington administration today turned its attention to the problem of providing means of getting Americans out of Mexico City.

Although Carranza's answer to the American demands was understood to be on its way to Washington, the authorities faced a new situation as a result of the reported evacuation of Mexico City by General Obregón and his Constitutional troops. It was pointed out that Carranza could not very well be held responsible for what happened to the Mexican capital after his forces regained control and Zapata, who is reported to have reentered the city, took up the reins.

The greatest fear of government officials, as stated by President Wilson and Secretary Bryan, is for outbreaks of mob violence, driven by hunger and it is to escape these consequences that the state department is trying to get out all of the several thousand Americans still in Mexico City, who desire to leave the capital. There was a tendency on the part

EMBARGO ON WOMEN EFFECT

News has been received that Durand has put into force an embargo upon American cotton shipped to Germany. The American sailing ship Pass of Baltimore has been seized by a British cruiser and taken to Kirmah. The ship carried 4,000 bales and sailed from New York for Bremen on January 26. She was chartered by H. B. Harris of Glasgow.

The Pass of Baltimore was built at Glasgow by Scott-Dunn & Co. in 1888 and is of 2,600 tons register. For many years she was owned by the Pass of Baltimore Shipping Company, a subsidiary of the Export Lumber Company. A few weeks ago she was sold to the Harbinger Cotton Company of New York for $7,500 for the cotton trade.

After Congress passed the act allowing the change she was transferred from Britain to American registry. Her owners also owned the Exodus, a ship recently sunk by a mine off the German coast. For months after the war began the British government did not interfere with American cotton ships bound for Germany.

Under the present embargo Great Britain is trying to prevent Germany from obtaining supplies of any kind.

10 Deputies Missing in Piute Uprising

BLUFF, Utah, March 10.—Hostilities between the renegade Piute Indians and U. S. deputy marshals was resumed early today. It is reported here that ten deputies sent out by Marshal Nebeker were attacked at House Mesa, about ten miles south-east of Bluff. Their fate is unknown, but as nothing has been heard from them it is believed they have been captured or killed.

Two Indians came in this forenoon and surrendered, but said their comrades were strongly intrenched and would not give up. Brigadier-General Scott, who arrived from Washington yesterday, has thus far been unable to see any of the Indian leaders.

4 State Boards Here to Discuss the B. & M.

The Public Service Commission of four states met in Boston today to discuss the reorganization of the Boston & Maine Railroad. The conference was held at the rooms of the Massachusetts Public Service Commission, No. 1 Beacon street, and was an executive session. The commissioners were those of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts.

It was announced that the New Hampshire commission brought a message from the leased line stockholders in New Hampshire who are said to oppose the reorganization bill introduced in the various legislatures.

Germans Silent on Bridgeport Arms

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The German embassy today refused to deny or affirm reports that it is watching the operations of the Bridgeport Arms Company, with a view to making a protest to the American government against its work in behalf of the allies.

White Star Cypris Reaches Liverpool

LIVERPOOL, March 10.—The White Star liner Cypris arrived here at 7:40 a. m. today. The last night of her voyage from New York, which she left February 27, was made with all lights extinguished to guard against the danger of German submarines. Her passengers reported the voyage successful.

Tax Increase Defeated

NEWBRIDGEPORT, March 10.—A plan to increase the tax limit here from $15 to $15 was defeated at a public meeting in City Hall.

Debt Fight Kicks Pastor

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 10.—The Rev. Herbert W. Carr of No. 223 Prospect street, is dead here of nervous prostration brought on by his efforts to free the Universal Society from debt.

THAW ILL, ASK FOR REMOVAL

NEW YORK, March 10.—Declaring that Harry K. Thaw is in a serious state of health due to a cold contracted in the Tombs, John B. Stanfield, chief of counsel for the state of New York, today requested Justice Puga to order his transfer to the prison ward at Bellevue. Deputy Attorney General Kennedy objected and Justice Puga appointed a physician to examine Thaw and report on his condition to the court.

If the physician reports that further confinement in the Tombs might further endanger Thaw's health, it is generally believed that he will be ordered to Bellevue until he has recovered.

STORY OF THAW'S ESCAPE

Howard H. Barnum, gatekeeper at Mattawan when Thaw made his getaway, was the first witness today. He described the escape.

"The bell rang," he said, "indicating somebody wanted to come in the yard. I opened the gate and the milkman, James Hickey, came in. Thaw was standing at the gate. There was a machine which looked like a taxicab in the road outside. The machine started, toward the gate and in a flash Thaw dashed through and jumped on the running board of the taxicab."

"I was dazed, dumfounded. I could not realize what had happened. Then I called for help and telephoned to the key room."

"On re-examination Barnum said he saw Thaw frequently during the day. He was gatekeeper and never saw any of the alleged list of accomplices. He irrationally told of Thaw. He remained several days at Helsingfors."

Bernhardt Wires She Is "Walking"

PARIS, March 10.—The Gaulois has received the following telegram from Mrs. Sarah Bernhardt as Bordeaux: "I am sending this telegram from the balcony, where I have been waiting for the last hour." "Walking" is, of course, somewhat of an exaggeration in view of the fact that her right leg was recently amputated, but the telegram shows that her convalescence has commenced.

200,000 Bay State Blankets for War

PITTSFIELD, March 10.—A $500,000 order for 200,000 army blankets for the French government has been placed in the Berkshire woolen mills. The order has been divided between the Pantowsee, Wilson, Berkshire Woolen Company mills of this city, and Strong and Hewitt mills of North Adams. Pittsfield mills will be operated night and day.

101 Minnesota Towns Go 'Dry'; 66 'Wet'

Lee, Higginson Are U. S. Swiss Agents

NEW YORK, March 10.—It became known here today that Lee Higginson & Co. of Boston have been appointed financial agents in America of the Swiss government. It was reported that a $1,000,000 loan of Swiss government notes would be placed on the market here.

Czar on Tour of Russian Empire

PITHOROD, March 10.—In accordance with his plan to visit all parts of the empire, Emperor Nicholas left last night for Finland. He will remain several days at Helsingfors.

FEAR FIGHT OFF CHESAPEAKE IF PRINCE EITEL FRIEDRICH ATTEMPTS TO PUT TO SEA

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., March 10.—Speeding suddenly into the harbor like a phantom, the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich hurried into Newport News today.

The object of the captain of the German warship in making port was to coal and make some urgent repairs. Immediately after his arrival here the second officer of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich came ashore and got in communication with the German Embassy at Washington.

It is believed that the arrival of the German vessel has already been the signal for the rushing of British warships to Chesapeake Bay in the hope of bottling up the cruiser or sinking her if she attempts to return to sea.

Unless the German cruiser is allowed to repair or intern here, the Prinz Eitel Friedrich's arrival is almost certain to mean a naval battle off Chesapeake Bay, the first struggle of the war in American waters. It is not believed possible for the German to escape before British warships arrive.

As the Germans have steadfastly refused to intern their ships, naval authorities here believe the Prinz Eitel Friedrich will undertake to make a dash to sea, taking the chances of battle if it is forced to do that, or intern.

The German ship is reported to have on board 326 prisoners of war taken during her career in southern waters. Her appearance caused a sensation here. She has been reported sunk several times.

After the battle off the Falkland Islands it was reported that British and Japanese warships had joined in a search for the Eitel Friedrich and the cruiser Dresden. The former slipped through the ships seeking her, however. Nothing is known as to the whereabouts of the Dresden.

SECRETARY DANIELS CONVENES NEUTRALITY BOARD.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels at Washington this afternoon announced that permission had been requested to allow urgent repairs to be made to the Prinz Eitel Friedrich in the Newport News shipyard. Secretary Daniels would not say whether the request came from the captain of the vessel or the German Embassy.

The neutrality board of the navy, headed by Rear Admiral Fiat, Captains Winterhalter and James Brownson, immediately called a meeting for the purpose of determining the points of law involved.

Secretary Daniels also stated that he had asked the Bureau of Naval Intelligence for a complete report of the movements and conduct of the Eitel Friedrich, so as to guide the neutrality board in arriving at their decision.

"The character of the vessel will determine the question as to whether it will be possible to allow her to make repairs at Newport News," said Secretary Daniels. "Ordinarily it would be possible to allow a belligerent to do so. However, we understand that there are a number of prisoners aboard the vessel and this may change her status entirely. We probably will reach a decision late today.

REVENUE CUTTER STANDS BY CRUISER.

When the Ellet Friedrich arrived at Newport News she anchored off the ship yards. Her master went ashore and conferred with Collector of the Port Hamilton relative to repairs for the ship and provisions and coal. The collector later went out to the ship to consult her officers. The revenue cutter Onondaga is standing by.

The 326 prisoners taken by the cruiser in her raids in southern waters are mostly Russian and French. She also had aboard the captain of an American schooner and his wife.

The Prinz Ellet Friedrich is a former North German Lloyd liner of 8,865 gross tons, 488 feet long, 55 feet beam and 32 feet depth. She was built at Stettin in 1904, and is a twin screw ship. There is also a Hamburg-American liner of the same name, of 4,650 tons.

The auxiliary cruiser has been roaming over the ocean for at least six months, destroying hostile merchant vessels.

REPORT RUSSIANS PURSUING GERMANS ALONG THE VISTULA

PETROGRAD, March 18.—During the fighting near Grodno, a single German corps lost from 15,000 to 18,000 killed alone. The Russian War Office announced today. It stated that the additional losses in wounded and prisoners resulted in almost total annihilation of the entire corps of 40,000 men.

This defeat, the War Office stated, was responsible for the German retreat from before Grodno.

The Russian War Office renewed the charge that "Hindenburg" is being used by the German troops to repel the fierce attacks of the Russian forces in Poland north of the Poles river, inflicting severe burns upon the retreating troops.

The fighting in this district as well as north of the Vistula is of a desperate character. An official statement issued here today claims some successes for the Russians, however, attacked with bombs the German positions at Sarsen and Sarsen, between the Poles river and the East Prussian frontier.

In the Carpathians, the statement says, Russian forces have succeeded in repelling their forces at Agost and hard fighting is now in progress there.

TURKS MAKE DESPERATE EFFORT

GUINEA, Switzerland, March 18.—According to the Tribune, an Italian newspaper, a number of Turkish battleships and several cruisers have pulled out, and are probably going to the Dardanelles. It says this information comes from a reliable source in Vienna.

LONDON, March 18.—Although another spell of bad weather has delayed the operations of the various fleets of British and French warships which are trying to force a passage through the Dardanelles, the attack continues with slow but sure success. Official dispatches tell of the second bombardment of Fort Moudjahid, Moudjahid, situated on Point Kild Bahr, in the Dardanelles, was supported by gunfire from Albion.

One day a squadron made up of certain ships will enter the waterway and bombard the Turkish forts and the next day it will be reinforced by other ships. A sort of silence and mystery has been thrown over the plans of the operations, but it is reported on excellent authority that twenty-two transports, bearing between 30,000 and 50,000 troops are on their way to the Dardanelles sphere of action.

TO SHELVE ENRI STAMBOUL.

It is reported from Salonika by way of Athens that part of the international fleet is cruising in the Archipelago off the coast of Asia Minor and the bombardment of Eski Samoud, an important Turkish port and the seizure of the cable station opposite the island of Tenedos are in prospect.

A Constantinople dispatch denies that the commandant at Smyrna is about to surrender to Vice-Admiral Fisher, whose fleet has been bombarding the city. On the contrary the Turkish advice says that Smyrna and its defenses were not greatly damaged by the fire of the British warships.

Twenty-two French transports have been sighted near the island of Marmara headed for the Dardanelles, according to a dispatch from Rome to the Frankfurter Zeitung, says a Berlin dispatch today.

A great fleet of supply ships has arrived off the entrance of the Dardanelles waiting ammunition for the fleet. It is expected that some of the big guns, which have been replaced at once.

Official dispatches tell of the second bombardment of Fort Moudjahid, Moudjahid, situated on Point Kild Bahr, in the Dardanelles, was supported by gunfire from Albion.

One day a squadron made up of certain ships will enter the waterway and bombard the Turkish forts and the next day it will be reinforced by other ships. A sort of silence and mystery has been thrown over the plans of the operations, but it is reported on excellent authority that twenty-two transports, bearing between 30,000 and 50,000 troops are on their way to the Dardanelles sphere of action.

It is reported from Salonika by way of Athens that part of the international fleet is cruising in the Archipelago off the coast of Asia Minor and the bombardment of Eski Samoud, an important Turkish port and the seizure of the cable station opposite the island of Tenedos are in prospect.

A Constantinople dispatch denies that the commandant at Smyrna is about to surrender to Vice-Admiral Fisher, whose fleet has been bombarding the city. On the contrary the Turkish advice says that Smyrna and its defenses were not greatly damaged by the fire of the British warships.

Twenty-two French transports have been sighted near the island of Marmara headed for the Dardanelles, according to a dispatch from Rome to the Frankfurter Zeitung, says a Berlin dispatch today.

WITNESSES TELL OF THAW'S ESCAPE

Gatekeeper Astonished, He Testifies, When Slayer Plunged Through Gate Into Auto.

There was nothing unusual in Thaw's appearance or demeanor on the day of the escape, several other witnesses at Mattawoman were called and testified that they noticed nothing unusual in Thaw's appearance or the manner he escaped.

SANITY IS ISSUE

Justice Page was a witness at the time of the escape from Mattawoman and is now counsel for the slayer. He testified that the slayer's sanity before the jury which is trying him on the conspiracy charge.

"I hope Harry Thaw gains his freedom," said Eve. "I hope Harry Thaw today, I am sure he would not be a menace to any one if he keeps away from Broadway life. I hope I shall not be forced to testify at the present trial. I feel that I am earning my own living, and I have built up an artistic reputation entirely apart from my connection with a notorious murder case."

The fight on the sanity issue has practically brought to the back ground the main issue in the case, that of proving Thaw guilty of conspiracy in making his escape from the asylum.

HOPE WIDEN CLAIM VICTORY

Both sides claim a victory in the opening battle of the legal war over Thaw's freedom. The crucial fight in the case is the sanity issue in the trial for conspiracy was started by John B. Stanchfield and the effort resulted in a drawn battle.

Justice Page ruled out a question as to the mental condition of Thaw three years ago. But he based his decision on the reasonableness of the testimony as related to the time of the defendant's escape from Mattawoman.

But what shade of advantage was gained probably rests with Thaw. In the view of Stanchfield, Justice Page clearly indicated that while testimony as to Thaw's condition several years ago might not be admissible Counsel Ask Transfer of Thaw on Account of Sudden Illness.

Justice Downing upon the nullification of which Stanchfield had based great hopes.

It also followed hard upon the refusal of the court to permit Deputy Attorney-General Kennedy to lay before the jury in his opening address the facts in the Abbott case in which Thaw was accused of seeking by bribery, through his counsel, to secure a certificate of his sanity. This was a clean set back for the State. Two rulings were on the point of the admissibility of testimony as to the sanity of the defendant. William Gordon, proprietor of the hotel at Beacon, N. Y., where the alleged conspirators met the night before the escape, was on the stand. Under cross-examination he told Stanchfield of his acquaintance with Thaw and the frequency of their meetings. Stanchfield was laboring to build a foundation for an expression of the witness' views of Thaw's sanity.

RAISE SANITY QUERY

"Isn't it true," he asked, "that in appearance, dress, actions and conduct he always impressed you as rational?"

Cook was on his feet immediately with an objection. "The issue of this defendant's sanity is not in question, and cannot be injected into this case unless a stipulation is made on the part of the defendant that insanity is his defense to the charge."

"I shall sustain the objection," said Justice Page before Stanchfield had a chance to reply. "You are in error in the statement of the reasonableness of the testimony it relates to the time of the escape."

Apparently now allowed for a stipulation and with Thaw looking at his counsel Stanchfield said quietly: "I understand your honor you sustain the objection but on the other hand it is improper cross-examination but I shall ask the court to permit me to ask the witness a few questions touching upon the present issue."

Justice Page then asked counsel for Thaw a deep sigh of relief for Thaw heaved a deep sigh of relief.

THE FAMOUS $1000 PIANO CHALLENGE CHECK

THE MOST TALKED OF CHECK IN BOSTON

Three weeks ago I challenged any and all piano dealers in Boston or Greater Boston, offering to forfeit One Thousand Dollars to any dealer who could show that I did not sell pianos as low as any dealer in this section. (No dealer has yet responded to my challenge.) I AM GOING TO MAKE THE CHALLENGE STRONGER. I WILL AGREE TO SELL PIANOS 25 TO 50 PER CENT. LESS. HOW'S THAT FOR A CHALLENGE?

J. P. COLLINS INVITES ALL THE PIANO DEALERS TO SUBSCRIBE TO A FUND FOR THE UNEMPLOYED OR ANY OTHER CHARITY

SINCE no piano dealer in Boston or New England has accepted my challenge as outlined above, and since I am desirous to devote the $1,000 check to some worthy charity, I invite nine of the richest piano dealers in Boston to donate $1,000 each and join me in making a Ten Thousand Dollar Fund for the unemployed of Boston. I am willing that the other piano dealers shall form their own committee for the proper disposal of the fund.

Come, Gentlemen, do something worthy of our high standing in the piano business. Even though I am against you in the fierce competition of the piano market and fight you every day legitimately for trade, I am with you morally in all the uplift work that we can do. Come, let us help.

GIRL IN COWLES CASE RETURNS

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 16.—Miss Alice Anita, former secretary in the Cowles family, named by Mrs. Florence J. Cowles in her suit for divorce against Dr. J. Edward Cowles, has returned to this city from her home in Germany to defend herself against the charges made by Mrs. Cowles.

It is understood that Miss Anita had only recently learned through some friends in this city that she had been named in the suit and Mrs. Cowles, it is said, was the best of friends with her departure from Portsmouth. In fact, Mrs. Cowles gave a reception in her home the evening before she left. It is understood that Miss Anita experienced no unusual amount of trouble in getting away from her home across the Atlantic owing to the war.

The home of Mrs. Sidney Barr on State street, where she is stopping, awaiting developments in the case, she refused to be interviewed, saying the case, which is still in the hands of the court and should come up at Exeter this month, according to agreement by the attorneys on both sides, made on February 15.

Orlando L. Gifford, attorney for Mrs. Cowles, said that to date he has not arranged, but Mrs. Cowles was ready to proceed at any time.

MRS. PAT CAMPBELL, English actress, who will appear at Colonial Theatre next week in "Pygmalion."

Mrs. Pat Campbell, the English actress, comes to Boston Monday for the first time in a number of years and will appear in a Broadway show play entitled "Pygmalion," which is one of the most successful plays of the season. Mrs. Campbell will appear in the role of Eliza Doolittle, the latest and in many respects the best play of Bernard Shaw.

In "Pygmalion," Mrs. Campbell has a very remarkable role. She first appears as a horrible coarse flower girl who is to be transformed into a society girl in six months as the result of a magic made by a professor of phonetics. In the third act she shows half way transformed and has the hardest phase of all.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., March 16.—Mrs. Helen M. Angle, the Mountford divorcee who is on trial in the Superior Court here charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Walter R. Ballou, the aged Fairfield county politician, on June 23 last, wept bitterly at the trial.

Several deputy sheriffs entered the courtroom bearing between them several large picture postcards containing the State's exhibit which are to be used as evidence against her.

Among these was the large card which the police found Mr. Ballou's last letter and which was found by John J. Walsh, attorney for the plaintiff, and asked:

Penn Protest May Pave Way for New Swimming League

More disruption in the Intercollegiate Swimming League was created when the league officials refused to grant Pennsylvania's protest of the Columbia swimming meet, in which Plymouth of Pennsylvania was ruled out for fouling Volmer of Columbia, giving the Blue and White the meet and a tie for the championship with Yale.

As a result of this decision, the Pennsylvania aquatics cohorts are considerably ruffled. Yale, too, is dissatisfied because of the unpleasant source to the effect that her sons squelched the proposed entrance to the league of Amherst and Union.
With things in such a troubled condition within the league fold, the forming of a new league to include Union, Yale and several other colleges has received a fresh impetus.

Jim Walsh to Teach Newsies How to Box

The Boston Newsboys' Club will inaugurate boxing instruction Wednesday evening. Jimmy Walsh, the retired bantam champion, will be on hand to help physical instructor William Freeman put the boys through the exercises. The method used will be the same that prevailed at the Municipal Gymnasium in Brooklyn, where Jimmy Walsh taught boxing at that institution. The method is very strict, but is for the best interest of the boy in the end.

Wednesday night only senior newsboys will be put through the instruction. Later on in the fall the younger newsboys will have a special class arranged for their hands.

Instructor Freeman is a strong advocate of boxing for boys and has always made it a part of his work among youths during his connection with the schools of Baltimore, Rich-

Leo Handy, the Brookline swim-

The race was a pretty battle up to twenty-five yards, when Handy took the lead away from Eddie Duffy and Jack Kelly.

Another record was lowered by Alphonse Steenack, who won first place in the 200-yard breast stroke, defeating Ben Jones and R. J. Kennedy of the Brookline Swimming ute 54.5 seconds, clipping 1.5 sec-

The Debt of Civilization to the Automobile

It Has Brought Health to Thousands of People, Widened Their Horizons and Helped Give Them an Education. And Its Work for the World Is Only Begun

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company

What the automobile has done for American industry everybody knows.

Hundreds of thousands of men find profitable employment in the manufacturing of motor cars and the many things that are accessory to their manufacture.

In the last year five hundred and fifteen thousand cars valued—at wholesale prices—at more than $485,000,000 were built in the United States.

Scores of trades were represented in this manufacture. Many NEW trades have been created by the business. Great cities owe their prosperity to the industry.

Because of automobiles every State employs thousands of additional men in building roads that cut down distance between city and city, and city and country.

Soon it will be possible to travel on a smooth and nearly straight road from the Atlantic Coast to the Pacific.

The out of the way village is no longer desolate. The automobile has brought it to close acquaintanceship with its larger neighbors. The farmer is now familiar with the city. And what is of still greater importance, the city man has gained a valuable health-giving acquaintance with the country.

At the thirteenth annual automobile show, now being held in Boston, you can see the progress of this great industry. All the best cars are on exhibition, from the limousine, as comfortable and almost as imposing as a private railway car, to the little runabout with which the man on a salary can take his wife and baby for a Sunday outing.

All owe their value to the same wonderful invention—the harnessing of the power stored centuries ago in the ground to modern motor power. The sun that shone on the prehistoric forests supplied the force that today enables men to travel about the country comfortably and safely, while the ox is browsing in the fields and the horse is rapidly becoming a purely ornamental survival of another age.

What the automobile has already done for civilization is marvelous. What it will do in the near future is almost beyond imagination.

Today the man who buys an automobile to all intents and purposes buys thousands of square miles of territory—a whole State perhaps, or half a dozen of them.

He has his choice of mountain, or ocean, or river, or forest.

His own yard expands into a kingdom. His horizon is limited only by the time he can give to his machine.

Today thousands of men, who a few years ago walked a beaten path between their houses and their place of work, are perfectly familiar with every river, every lake, every field and every woodland within a radius of a hundred miles from their homes.

The city man goes into the country, gets acquainted with the farmer, sees how grain and fruit grow, and how cattle thrive, and becomes better educated and more liberal in his views.

The farmer learns from these new acquaintances that he and the man from the city have the same interests in good government and in things in general.

So he buys an automobile and soon knows all about the city markets and how to dispose of his crops to the best advantage.

The man with close, constant indoor work gets a week's supply of rest and fresh air on Sunday.

Better still, he gets his wife away from the cook stove and the household duties and gets color into her cheeks and into the cheeks of the children.

Fresh air, so hard to get in the city, is plentiful in the country. And, as the automobile owner soon finds, it is well worth going after.

The revolution of the last ten or fifteen years brought by the automobile business assures a still greater revolution in the next ten years.

Where there is one automobile now, there will soon be twenty. Where there is one in a suburban block there are little garages, there will be scores of them.

An automobile is no longer a luxury, it is a good investment. It pays big returns in health and happiness, in the widening of the physical and mental horizons, and in real education.

It is no longer a rich man's plaything. It is a general necessity, and to own one is well worth any reasonable sacrifice that a man with a family can make.

A Contemptible Practice

An Imposition Upon Department Stores as a Result of Which Honest Customers Are Obligated to Pay for the Fraudulent Vanity of the Dishonest

There is a form of dishonesty among a large number of women in Metropolitan Boston which will astonish the men and the rest of the women.

It has gradually grown out of the liberal credit system of the department stores. It consists of obtaining goods on credit without any intention of buying them, but in order to use them temporarily and then to return them when they are thus made second-hand.

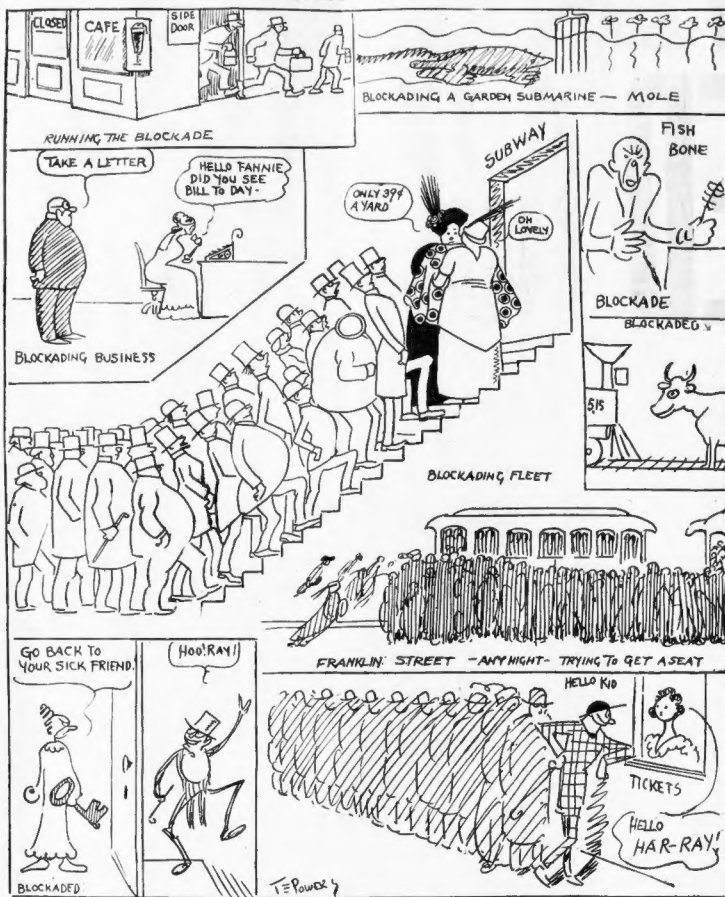

A lady ordered an expensive Oriental rug. She kept it and used it for nearly three months without paying for it. Then, on the pretext that she wanted a larger and more expensive rug, she

The Fine Art of Loving

By ELBERT HUBBARD

THE world has always been run on a short allowance of love. Passion has been plentiful, but love scarce—the love that endureth long and is kind.

However, our own America has more love in it today than it ever had before.

To love and be loved means the highest form of happiness that mortals know.

Not to love or be loved means misery.

Those who are well loved live long and well.

These are the people who accomplish results in the world of art, music, literature, acting, oratory, business.

"Love" and "like" are synonymous terms.

To love means allying yourself to the forces of the universe—moving with the eternal tide—"kitching your wagon to a star."

To love one is to love all. For loving one we are in harmony with all. Then do our footfalls trinkle with the music of the spheres, and the days are radiant.

To be loving and lovable one has to have certain qualities—physical, mental and moral.

And our moral and mental qualities, psychologists now tell us, turn largely on our physical condition.

These rare moments when we are in tune with the infinite are only possible when the body does its perfect work.

"The sick man is a rascal," said old Dr. Johnson. And the world now knows it is true. To be well is not only a privilege but a duty. The days of the flagellants are gone.

The chief cause of illness among Americans is overeating. In India it may be famine, but here, as a people, we eat to repel, and our energies are taxed getting rid of the waste.

Most of our maladies are caused by malnutrition.

Relief is sought in medication, and the "dope habit" is upon us. Sluggishness follows stimulation, as does night the day. Thus shuttles in a chair for a "pick-me-up," and the man becomes a "dread."

All of his energies are being consumed in running his boiler; there is no power left for the pulleys.

Bad breath, watery eyes, pain in the side, dancing spots on the vision, fatulence, dizziness, headache, all mean food poisoning.

What is called "heart disease" is usually a form of indigestion.

Many people eat four meals a day—breakfast, luncheon, dinner, and supper after the theatre. Such folk are bound to suffer, and much of the time are, consequently, unloving and unlovable.

When you are aware you have a stomach you are given to introspection, and introspection means misery. And misery is contagious.

Also, I might add that happiness is not only contagious, but infectious.

Joy runs over and inundates everything. It bubbles, effervesces, overflows its banks and makes the waste places green. We keep joy by giving it away. A thought is not our own until we impart it to another. And in order to have sweet and joyous thoughts you must have a body that can mirror your joyous mood.

If we were sailors, living twelve hours or more a day in the open air, we could stuff our holds with a mixed cargo and yet thrive. But living much indoors, with vexed mental problems to solve, we need the fertile mind and the insight that sees things in their true light.

To this end we must get rid of the farinaceous habit of overeating.

Committer fed his hen out grease and got two eggs a day from her. We may now expect to see ads like this:

MOTOFOL: MAKES YOUR HENS EXCEED SPEED LIMIT.

For Trucks—ANG-GRANK—For Chickens.

MORRIGREASE CO.—Gentlemen: I used two quarts of your MORRIGREASE on my car and it has laid two dozen eggs this week.—A. N. Antia.

Speaking of "efficiency plus" there's only one instance we know of and that's Outmet, who's rated "plus."

During its past session Congress talked 50,000,000 words, most of them unnecessary.

We want less food—and better food.

We would be glib, generous gentlemen, and intelligent, gracious ladies, all!

The sick, the grouchy have got to try.

We would possess our souls in patience. We would know the fine art of listening. We would sit in the silence with our friend without embarrassment and pack each pause with feeling. For only then are we lovable.

To be lovable we must have certain mental and moral qualities. By mental qualities we mean the traits of character that make you able to put yourself in place of the other person.

This means deference for the rights of others, consideration, sympathy, willingness to blame and quickness to command.

Mental qualities are those that we use in making decisions. Memory, mental energy, knowledge, insight, ability to face problems and solve them rightly, to throw the spotlight of imagination into the future and thus possess the prophetic vision.

People who are hurried, worried, in doubt, are dangerous in a business way, unuseful and unreliable.

They blame all their life on others and have a faculty of making a whole household miserable. And, of course, they are unlovable.

Such people have a convulsed, cracked lips, bloated complexion, dull eyes, yellow teeth.

Cut down your food quantity, increase your breathing and note how your love capacity keeps pace, and patience possesses your soul!

THE ANSWER

UP to the Gates of gleaming Pearl, There came the spirit of a girl. And to the white-robed Guard she said:

"Dear Angel, am I truly dead? Just yonder, lying on my bed, I heard them say it; and they wept. And after that, methinks I slept.

Then, when I woke, I saw your face. And suddenly was in this place. It seems a pleasant place to be. Yet earth was fair enough to me.

What is there here, to do, or see? Will I see God, dear Angel, say? And is He very far away?"

The Angel said, "You are in truth What men call dead. That word to youth is full of terror; but it means Only a change of tasks, and some.

You have been brought to us, because Of certain ancient karmic laws Set into motion, aeons gone. By us you will be guided on

From plane to plane, and sphere to sphere. Until your tasks are finished here. Then back to earth, the home of man. To work again another span."

"But, Angel, when will I see God?" "After the final path is trod: After you no more long, or crave. To see, or hear, or own, or have Aught beside—HIM. Then shall His face Reveal itself to you in space. And you shall find yourself made one With that Great Sun, behind the sun. Child, go thy way inside the gate, Where many eager loved ones wait. Death is but larger life begun."

returned the first rug, having her account credited with the cost of it, and got a larger and costlier one.

This second rug she kept for some weeks, without paying for it, and then sent it back and had her account credited with it on the grounds that she was closing her house for the Summer. Thus she had a handsome rug for months without paying for it.

Mrs. So-and-So gives a bridge party. The invitations are issued for Wednesday afternoon. On Monday or Tuesday Mrs. So-and-So will visit some department store and will order expensive rugs, extra tables, expensive lamps and such other paraphernalia as will enable her to make a display. The guests assemble and admire the house furnishings, which gratifies the vanity of the hostess, but does not always deceive ALL the guests. The next day Mrs. So-and-So notifies the store that she does not want the goods; that the carpet is too large for the room or that its colors do not harmonize with the furniture or the walls or gives some other sufficient but untruthful pretext for returning the goods.

Mrs. X. is invited to an entertainment for Friday evening. On Wednesday or Thursday she visits the stores and selects a gown and a hat which please her and orders them sent home on approval. On Friday evening she sails forth in her borrowed raiment and plumes to the entertainment. Her vanity has been gratified by what the mirror tells her, BUT WHAT HAS BECOME OF HER SELF-RESPECT? She does not intend to put by the gown or the hat and on the morrow she returns both the gown and the hat on some specious plea. The store which has accommodatedly trusted her with the goods finds that the hat has pin holes and bears other evidence of use. It calls this fact to the attention of madam, but madam stares coldly and blankly at the man and replies that she knows nothing about it.

This practice is growing in this community. It can lead to but one result if it is continued. It is said that one department store alone has in its wagons every day goods out on approval and merchandise being returned amounting in value to one hundred thousand dollars. This is a very convenient practice to honest purchasers, but it cannot be continued if the dishonest customers persist in their vain, ridiculous dishonesty.

It is vain and ridiculous. It deceives fewer people than those who practice it appear to believe. Certainly, the neighbors who observe the team arrive with the goods on the day before the party and take them away on the day after are not deceived. Certainly those who are familiar with the household furnishings are not deceived. Surely those who, having good memories, notice that their hostess wears an expensive hat and gown on a particular occasion and then never wears them again, are not deceived.

The whole practice is contemptible and absurd. It lowers the moral tone of the community. It increases the cost of doing business. It makes honest customers pay for the fraudulent vanity of the dishonest.

It is bad altogether. The honest customers would welcome the most stringent rules and regulations which the merchants could make against this form of dishonesty.

Fashionable Society Rebuked by "Mother" Jones

"No nation can ever grow greater than its women. None ever has; none ever will. It is the women who decide the fate of a nation, and that has always been so, as history proves."

Says "Mother" Jones in an article all women should read, to be printed exclusively in next Sunday's AMERICAN.
